Alive and Well in Pakistan 2004 bold assertions have been made in policy reports and popular articles on the high and increasing enrollment in pakistani religious schools commonly known as madrassas given the importance placed on the subject by policymakers in pakistan and those internationally it is troubling that none of the reports and articles reviewed based their analysis on publicly available data or established statistical methodologies the authors of this paper use published data sources and a census of schooling choice to show that existing estimates are inflated by an order of magnitude madrassas account for less than 1 percent of all enrollment in the country and there is no evidence of a dramatic increase in recent years the educational landscape in pakistan has changed substantially in the past decade but this is due to an explosion of private schools an important fact that has been left out of the debate on pakistani education moreover when the authors look at school choice they find that no one explanation fits the data while most existing theories of madrasa enrollment are based on household attributes for instance a preference for religious schooling or the household s access to other schooling options the data show that among households with at least one child enrolled in a

madrassa 75 percent send their second and or third child to a public or private school or both widely promoted theories simply do not explain this substantial variation within households this paper a product of the public services team development research group is part of a larger effort in the group to examine issues relating to educational outcomes world bank web site

Radicalization in Pakistan 1961 the relationship between america and pakistan is based on mutual incomprehension and always has been pakistan to american eyes has gone from being a quirky irrelevance to a stabilizing friend to an essential military ally to a seedbed of terror america to pakistani eyes has been a guarantee of security a coldly distant scold an enthusiastic military enabler and is now a threat to national security and a source of humiliation the countries are not merely at odds each believes it can play the other with sometimes absurd sometimes tragic results the conventional narrative about the war in afghanistan for instance has revolved around the soviet invasion in 1979 but president jimmy carter signed the first authorization to help the pakistani backed mujahedeen covertly on july 3 almost six months before the soviets invaded americans were told and like to believe that what followed was charlie wilson s war of afghani liberation with which they remain embroiled to this day it was not it was general zia ul haq s vicious regional power play husain haqqani has a unique insight into pakistan his homeland and america where he was ambassador and is now a professor at boston university his life has mapped the relationship of the two countries and he has found himself often close to the heart of it sometimes in very confrontational circumstances and this has allowed him to write the story of a misbegotten diplomatic love affair here memorably laid bare
