stephanie urdang was born in cape town south africa into a white jewish family staunchly opposed to the apartheid regime in 1967 at the age of twenty three no longer able to tolerate the grotesque iniquities and oppression of apartheid she chose exile and emigrated to the united states there she embraced feminism met anti apartheid and solidarity movement activists and encountered a particularly american brand of racial injustice urdang also met african revolutionaries such as amilcar cabral who would influence her return to africa and her subsequent journalism in 1974 she trekked through the liberation zones of guinea bissau during its war of independence in the 1980 s she returned repeatedly to mozambique and saw how south africa was fomenting a civil war aimed to destroy the newly independent country from the vantage point of her activism in the united states and from her travels in africa urdang tracked and wrote about the slow inexorable demise of apartheid that led to south africa s first democratic elections when she could finally return home urdang s memoir maps out her quest for the meaning of home and for the lived reality of revolution with empathy courage and a keen eye for historical and geographic detail this is a personal narrative beautifully told of a journey traveled by an indefatigable exile who while yearning for home continued to question where as a citizen of both south africa and the united states she belongs my south africa she writes on her return in 1991 after the release of nelson mandela how could i have imagined for one instant that i could return to its beauty and not its pain before 1652 there were no labourers no workers no servants and no servitude all that was was labour of love black people worked their own farms they were masters on their own right the african land and its wealth gave our great grand parents the right to be masters black children are the children of masters they have the right to know that the great are only great because we are on our knees they have the right to know because knowledge is power they must know that horrible accidents happened in south africa after 1652 historical accidents did occur historical accidents which were deliberate and were designed to put the destiny of a south african black child in suffering and poverty forever then there was no poverty and no million orphans there were million cattle and million hectors of land there was human dignity the meaning of which was freedom from fear hatred and poverty matsime simon mohapi from the unbroken chains of apartheid south africa with the help of discourse analysis and ideology critique ellen wesemüller establishes a theoretical framework to analyze african nationalism in apartheid and post apartheid south africa following the constructivist school of thought the study adopts the assumption that nations are imagined communities which are built on invented traditions it shows that historically and analytically there are two distinct concepts of nationalism constitutional and ethnic nationalism these concepts can be retraced in south africa where they form the central antagonism of black political thought the study of post apartheid african nationalism is placed in its historical perspective by focusing on the major milestones of african national congress discourse before and during apartheid it demonstrates that throughout its history the anc was characterized by the rivalry between concepts of constitutional and ethnic nationalism while the former concept found its counterpart in charterism the latter was adopted by african nationalism though the anc in its majority embraced charterism it continually played with the appeal of an exclusive racial nationalism the theoretical and historical contextualization of the book allows for the investigation of the various dimensions of current anc discourse on african nationalism wesemüller analyses different concepts of nationalism employed by the anc and compares these models to those discussed in academic literature she concludes that in post apartheid south africa the historical dichotomy of africanist and charterist nationalism persists within the anc while early concepts of nationalism like mandela s rainbow nation and mbeki s i am an african paid tribute to charterism the discourses on the african renaissance and mbeki s two nation address at least leave openings for africanist interpretations furthermore the analysis shows that nationalism is not only a product of discourse but also one of material conditions the study provides evidence that it is not only the anc that hijacks african nationalism in order to mobilize their electorate and push through unpopular policy choices also there are compelling material reasons for some south africans to adopt a nationalist agenda this is demonstrated by the new black bourgeoisie that mediates the gap between rich and poor as well as black and white african nationalism in this regard serves to legitimate domination and existing relations of inequality it affirms an african elite while neither uplifting the majority of african poor nor threatening the material privileges of white south africans lastly ellen wesemüller gives an outlook on the political implications of a resurrected nationalism the effects can be analyzed according to the two promises of nationalism superiority over outsiders and equality between insiders superiority in post apartheid south africa is established over other african countries immigrants and inner south african groups that are considered foreign peeping through the reeds is a fictionalised story about growing up coloured under apartheid in south africa based on real events the story is told through the frank and insider voice of musuva who narrates the story of a girl tumelo the story draws on many conversations with elders and provides spine chilling insight into what enslavement colonialism class and apartheid and the struggle for freedom did to people and their mental health to families and to relationships in south africa and celebrates a people s deep resilience in their fight for human rights and dignity though south africa has had a truth and reconciliation commission after the end of apartheid much of what is told in this book is little known little acknowledged and little spoken about in spite of the bottomless pain and loss endured through many generations the story reflects the brave and enduring spirit of the people of the cape peeping through the reeds hopes to make its contribution to a further understanding of unknown dimensions of south africa s miraculous survival of a crime against humanity and the necessity of the ongoing healing project for all south africans today for those who would have visited south africa and the cape for the world cup in 2010 or at any other time in the past and also for those who hope to do so in future this story hopes to help readers gain an empathetic and rare insight into a little understood genetically most diverse brutalised impoverished and marginalised people who today inhabit an enchanting landscape of the earth the southernmost region of the continent of africa which is the closest to the south pole in this story the reader gets to know of a place and people of world significance to all humanity

The Unbroken Chains of Apartheid south africa is an example of a relatively successful political transition nevertheless the first democratic elections in 1994 did not change the systemic and structural inequalities the socio economic legacies of discrimination or the alienation of the different population groups at the centre of this study is the transformation potential of two formerly white neighbourhoods in johannesburg norwood and orange grove both neighbourhoods have experienced considerable demographic changes and the various population groups differ in terms of their expectations and their willingness to adjust to the changes provoked by the transition at the local level patterns of discrimination and oppression continue spaces opportunities and leverage of social networks engaged in the community are influenced by the resources people are able to access moreover cooperation is contested in a context of pervasive inequality because there is no incentive for privileged groups to change arrangements that benefit them in this context of conflicting interests and unequal access to power and resources decentralisation and the promotion of participatory structures in local communities are a problem and the reliance on local networks as agents of development is questionable on may 1 1977 twenty year old american paul kingery arrived in apartheid era south africa as a missionary what he saw shocked him and changed him into an activist for oppressed groups he knew then that he was seeing only part of the story of apartheid at a time when the government limited free speech and action his own actions to resist the visible aspects of apartheid that he witnessed were the humble first attempts of a youth but they set his life on a course as a change agent promoting international peace by the time he turned 60 history had provided him with details of the rest of the story allowing him to weave that into his experience as a youth start contrasts thus came into sharper focus between the lives of whites and blacks living in south africa in that era the causal chain of separation bias discrimination violence revolution and its aftermath is a warning for all places and eras this book comprises eight essays that consider the politics and polemics of monuments in africa in the wake of the rhodesmustfall movement in 2015 the removal of the rhodes statue from uct main campus is the pivot on which the discussion of monuments as heritage in south africa turns it raised a number of questions about the implementation of heritage policy and the unequal deployment of memorials in the south african and other postcolonial landscapes the essays in this volume are written by authors coming from different backgrounds and different disciplines they address different aspects of this event and its aftermath offering some intensive critique of existing monuments analysing the successes of new initiatives meditating on the visual resonances of all monuments and attempting to map ways of moving forward

Globalization and Post-apartheid South Africa

the preamble to the post apartheid south african constitution states that south africa belongs to all who live in it united in our diversity and promises to lay the foundations for a democratic and open society in which government is based on the will of the people and every citizen is equally protected by law and to improve the quality of life of all citizens this would seem to commit the south african government to amongst other things the implementation of policies aimed at fostering a common sense of south african national identity at societal development and at reducing of levels of social inequality however in the period of more than a decade that has now elapsed since the end of apartheid there has been widespread discontent with regard to the degree of progress made in connection with the realisation of these constitutional aspirations the limits to liberation in the post apartheid era has been a theme of much recent research in the fields of sociology and political theory e.g. Luckham 1998 Robins 2005a linguists have also paid considerable attention to the south african situation with the realisation that many of the factors that have prevented and are continuing to prevent effective progress towards the achievement of these constitutional goals are linguistic in their origin boet said kevin there s a jazz somewhere down by the assembly hall where okes can do what they smaaak and i hear from reliable sources that it s lekker down there like most children of the 1970s and 1980s richard poplak grew up obsessed with pop culture watching the cosby show listening to guns n roses and quoting lines from mad max movies were part of his everyday life but in richard s country south africa censorship in the newspapers military training at school and different rules for different races were also just a part of everyday life it was as richard says a different kind of normal ja no man articulates what it was like to live through apartheid as a white jewish boy in suburban johannesburg told with extraordinary humour and self awareness richard s story brings his gradual understanding of the difference between his country and the rest of the world vividly to life a startlingly original memoir that veers sharply from the quotidian to the bizarre and back again ja no man is an enlightening darkly hilarious and at times disturbing read using a broad range of literature to examine the political culture of white south africa peck finds both a preoccupation with political issues and a dislike for politics the literature examined ranges from south african propaganda through a variety of bestsellers adventure stories and mystery novels written by authors such as wilbur smith and james mcclure to self conscious literary works of the canonical white south african authors such as alan paton andré brink and nadine gordimer the study gives attention to anti political features of the liberal tradition that dominated south african writing and to the failure of writers who undermined that tradition to generate a more positive view of politics the morbid fascination with politics that is found across the full spectrum of creative writing is a reflection of the circumstances in which writers found themselves but it is still a worrisome feature of the white south african political culture
