The share of mortgage borrowing by non-occupant homeowners was relatively high in states where home values rose rapidly after the housing boom. Foreclosures on non-occupant mortgages in several midwestern and northeastern states reflected a high rate of foreclosure per mortgage, not a high volume of mortgages to non-occupant homeowners. The reverse held true in coastal and mountain states. Nevada and Florida have experienced the greatest impact overall because they have both a high volume of mortgages to non-occupant homeowners and a high rate of foreclosure on those mortgages.

The fourth edition of Housing Policy in the United States refreshes its classic foundational coverage of the field with new data analysis and comparative focus. This landmark volume offers a broad overview that synthesizes a wide range of material to highlight the significant problems, concepts, programs, and debates that all define the aims, challenges, and milestones within and involving housing policy. Expanded discussion in this edition centers on state and local activity to produce and preserve affordable housing, the impact and the implications of reduced financial incentives for homeowners. Other features of this new edition include analysis of the impact of the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act of 2017 on housing-related tax expenditures, review of the state of fair housing programs in the wake of the Trump administration's rollback of several key programs and policies, cross-examination of U.S. housing policy and conditions in an international context featuring the latest available data on housing patterns and conditions. This is an excellent companion for graduate and advanced undergraduate courses in urban studies, urban planning, sociology, and social policy, and housing policy.
